

BAD BOOKS, FEW ANSWERS

Hamilton Township doesn't know how much money it has. As state wades through audits, scrutiny turns to fiscal officer.

HAMILTON TWP. — Marr Park was to become one of the largest parks in Warren County when Hamilton Township officials unveiled plans for it in 2010.

The sprawling 149-acre park on Nunner Road was envisioned with 32 multi-use sports fields, tennis and basketball courts, shelter houses, picnic and playground areas, wetland and woodland areas, 6 miles of walking trails and a fishing lake, among other amenities.

Instead, the site — into which officials

RACHEL RICHARDSON

@rachelincincy

I cover issues affecting the lives of residents and business owners in the fast-growing communities of Warren County. Email me at rrichardson@enquirer.com.

have already sunk more than $930,000 and which was supposed to open to the public in 2012 — has been abandoned, a victim of what a group of residents and some officials say is more than a decade of financial mismanagement in the fast-growing

Warren County community.

“We have a roundabout to nowhere,” Trustee David Wallace said of a circular junction built in 2012 to accommodate the

See TOWNSHIP, Page A4

Hamilton Township has spent more than $900,000 on Marr Park since the project was announced in 2009, but plans stalled after trustees found the township didn't have the money they were told it had. THE ENQUIRER/RACHEL RICHARDSON

Support growing for medical marijuana A13

CVG air marshal office on list for extinction A3

Old insurance may be kept another year 2B

USA TODAY

Protesters had easy entrance to P&G offices

Police: ‘Darn lucky it was not a terrorist action’

By Jennifer Edwards Baker

jbaker@enquirer.com
and Adam Kiefaber
akiefaber@enquirer.com

How did nine Greenpeace activists get past security at Procter & Gamble headquarters, string zip line between the headquarters' towers and hang 60-foot banners from the facades to protest the company's palm oil supplier?

It appears they walked in. “It was a major breach of security,” Cincinnati police Capt. Paul Broxterman said Wednesday.

“I am sure Procter & Gamble is going over their security procedures with a fine-tooth comb today. We are darn lucky it was not a terrorist action. If this was a terrorist act and they were able to breach security at a world headquarters, this could have been catastrophic.”

See P&G, Page A6

WHAT'S THE FUSS?

Learn more about palm oil and why Greenpeace has concerns over its production. A6

CINCINNATI.COM FACEBOOK.COM / ENQUIRER @ENQUIRER

$1.00 RETAIL
Portions of today's Enquirer were printed on recycled paper

INDEX
Six sections, 173rd year, No. 331
Copyright 2014,
The Cincinnati Enquirer

Business A16
Carolyn Hax A24
Classified A24, D4-8

Comics Fun1
Health D1
Local A13

Lotteries A14
Obituaries A21
Opinion A10

Puzzles Fun2
Sports C1
Today in History A2

WEATHER
High: 43°
Low: 29°

FRANÇOIS BOUCHER

GENIUS & GRACE

AND THE GENERATION OF 1700

February 14 - May 11, 2014

François Boucher (1703-1770), Recumbent Female Nude (detail), circa 1742-43, red, white, and black chalk on cream antique laid paper, The Horvitz Collection, Boston.

cincinnati art museum
we bring people and art together
cincinnatiartmuseum.org
SPONSORED BY:

FUND EVALUATION GROUP
ROBERT LEHMAN FOUNDATION, INC.