Guam police officers who started the Blue House investigation four years ago allegedly belittled the women who were rescued from the Tamuning brothel, according to a pair of signed affidavits.

allegedly told the women they had AIDS and sprayed the precinct with disinfectant after the women arrived, according to the affidavits, which were obtained by the Pacific Daily News. One officer allegedly showed Blue House workers his gun while interviewing them, one of the affidavits states.

"(An officer) then tried to release his pistol from his holster," states the affidavit from Saknin Weria, a Blue House supervisor. "He made it visible to all the girls and then said you girls are all infected with AIDS and now he could not go home. He said

Southern High could house GATE theater

Failed fire inspection:

Gifted and Talent Education students rehearse their stage production of Agatha Christie's "The Mousetrap" outside the entrance of the GATE Theater in Tiyan yesterday. The performers were unable to use the theater's stage to practice because the facility failed to pass an inspection performed by the Guam Fire Department last week, said Anne Gorby, GATE Theater Program director.

Marines' numbers will be steady

Population will be 5,000, even with rotational forces

TO THE POINT

■ Officials said the number of Marines on Guam will remain at a steady 5,000 even as troops rotate.

Alvarez

Two-thirds of the 5,000 Marines that come to Guam in the military buildup will be "rotational," but there will still be at least 5,000 Marines on island at any given time.

The concept of "rotational

Marines" was added to the buildup discussion when the troop relocation plan shrunk earlier this year, but the public hasn't been given a clear explanation of what this means until now. Maj. Darren Alvarez, deputy director of the Joint Guam Program Office, explained yesterday how the rotational Marine program would work.

A third of the Marines — about 1,700 — will be stationed on Guam with their families, Alvarez said. The other two thirds — about 3,300 — will be Marines who are on six-month deployments to Guam, but are home-based elsewhere, Alvarez said.
